Sommario/riassunto	The 4th International Workshop on Advances on Resilient and Intelligent Cities (ARIC 2021) builds on the success of the last three workshops. The COVID-19 pandemic has highlighted the need for cities to increasingly become more effective in delivering basic public services, utilizing emerging technologies, to better serve its residents. This workshop is motivated by three recent advances: a technology-driven future; new regulations to combat emerging social changes; and advances in computational sciences. By bringing in researchers and practitioners from different disciplines, this workshop focuses on identifying the current advancements, challenges and future directions in science and technology to address the convergence of climate justice, net zero carbon and infrastructure resilience.
