

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910536557003321
Autore	Parsons Raymond
Titolo	Zumanomics Revisited [[electronic resource]]
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Chicago, : Jacana Media, 2014
ISBN	1-4314-0792-5
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (206 p.)
Disciplina	338.968
Soggetti	South Africa -- Economic conditions -- 21st century South Africa -- Economic policy South Africa -- Politics and government -- 21st century Electronic books.
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Description based upon print version of record.
Nota di contenuto	Front Cover; About the Author; Title Page; Imprint Page; Dedication; Contents; Acknowledgements; List of Abbreviations; Preface; 1 - Global economic perspectives; 2 - The South African Economy: Past and prospective; 3 - But why is South Africa here yet again?; 4 - The National Development Plan: The 'new normal' for South Africa?; 5 - Addressing the 'tale of five deficits'; A. The social deficit; B. The fiscal deficit; C. The trade deficit; D. The delivery deficit; E. The trust deficit; 6 - Implementing the National Development Plan: Risks and opportunities; 7 - The mixed economy and business 8 - The National Development Plan and Presidents Zuma's place in history 9 - Conclusion: Can South Africa prove the sceptics wrong?; References; Index; Back Cover
Sommario/riassunto	In the light of global and domestic developments since 2009, Raymond Parsons now reassesses the economic prospects for SA post-Mangaung and following the 2014 general election. While the 2009 publication was a collective effort with other contributors, this is an individual one. Many red lights are flashing for the economy and SA is struggling to avoid a 'low-growth trap'. What are the conditions for the success of the National Development Plan's vision for 2030 and can it be translated into reality? What will happen after the 2014 election? Drawing on his considerable experience and

