Sommario/riassunto	This book explores feminist discussions and decolonial activism, focusing on the concept of love as a poetic relationship. Coordinated by Karina Bidaseca and Marta Sierra, it features contributions from various authors who delve into themes such as decolonial feminism, social anthropology, and multispecies feminism. The text examines the intersection of feminism with ecological, racial, and cultural issues in Latin America. It aims to deconstruct colonial narratives and promote critical thinking, targeting scholars and activists interested in feminist theory and decolonial practices.
