

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910660122603321
Autore	Walter James <1949->
Titolo	What were they thinking? [[electronic resource]] : the politics of ideas in Australia / / James Walter with Tod Moore
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Sydney, : University of New South Wales, 2010
ISBN	1-74223-248-5
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (490 p.)
Altri autori (Persone)	MooreTod
Disciplina	320.9/94
Soggetti	Political science - Australia - History Australia Politics and government History
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Description based upon print version of record.
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references (p. 354-373) and index.
Nota di contenuto	Cover; About the author; Title; Copyright Page; Contents; Acknowledgments; Introduction; Part I: The way we live now; 1: A seismic shift?; Part II: Democracy by degrees; 2: 'Really respectable settlers' or 'most furious democrats'?; 3: Defining interests; Part III: The 'new liberal' agenda; 4: A true Commonwealth?; 5: Parallel visions: the settlement in question?; 6: A civic order; Part IV: Reconstructions: policies for prosperity; 7: Building the 'modern' nation; 8: Unintended consequences; Part V: The American songbook; 9: Life is not meant to be easy; 10: A veto on politics Part VI: Reconsiderations: the way we live now, reprise 11: Conclusion: political reasoning and political action; Guide to sources; Notes
Sommario/riassunto	Challenging conventional ways of thinking about politics, this ambitious history of 20th-century Australian political thought explains how several of the most well-established Australian political ideas, such as franchise and the welfare state, came to be. By examining the impact of these ideas and the ways they have inspired individuals and movements from before the first prime minister, Edmund Barton, all the way to current incumbent Kevin Rudd, this robust study makes what often seems arcane or abstract come to life.