

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910689386203321
Titolo	Algeria [[electronic resource]] : a country study // Federal Research Division, Library of Congress ; edited by Helen Chapan [sic] Metz
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Washington, D.C. : , : Federal Research Division, Library of Congress, , [1993]
Altri autori (Persone)	MetzHelen Chapin <1928-2011.>
Disciplina	910
Soggetti	Algeria
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Title from title screen (viewed Mar. 8, 2002). "Research completed December 1993."
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references.

2. Record Nr.	UNINA9910983301103321
Autore	March-Russell Paul
Titolo	J. G. Ballard's "Crash" // by Paul March-Russell
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Cham : , : Springer Nature Switzerland : , : Imprint : Palgrave Macmillan, , 2025
ISBN	9783031730948 3031730941
Edizione	[1st ed. 2025.]
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (95 pages)
Collana	Palgrave Science Fiction and Fantasy: A New Canon, , 2662-8570
Disciplina	809.05
Soggetti	Literature, Modern - 20th century Literature, Modern - 21st century Popular culture Communication in science Contemporary Literature Popular Culture Science Communication
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Nota di contenuto	1. Introduction: Crash and Canonicity -- 2. Reading Crash: The Making of a Modern Myth -- 3. Writing Crash: Modernism/Science Fiction/New Worlds -- 4. Rogue Anthropology: Crash, Surrealism, and The Independent Group -- 5. Vicissitudes of the Body: Cyborgs and Animots -- 6. Moral Pornograopy: "The Woman of the Future" -- 7. Conclusion: Crash and Petromodernity.
Sommario/riassunto	"Paul March-Russell writes with an air of quiet authority and moves around the field of Ballard and New Wave science fiction with evident expertise." —Roger Luckhurst, Geoffrey Tillotson Chair of Nineteenth-Century Studies, Birkbeck, University of London, UK Crash (1973) by the British novelist, J.G. Ballard, is an iconic yet troubling work of the New Wave in science fiction, primarily associated with the London-based magazine New Worlds, and regarded as a pivotal moment in the history of the genre. This study not only introduces the major critical arguments about the novel but also takes them to task as part of a detailed thesis that reads Crash back into the legacy of modernism in science fiction. This critique makes a strategic intervention into how twentieth-century literary history has been (falsely) divided into modernist and postmodern periods – as well as into divisions between “high” (modernist) literature and “low” popular culture (SF). The book therefore contributes to both SF studies and the expanding field of the New Modernist Studies. Each chapter builds successively upon its predecessor, so as to offer a coherent yet wide-ranging thesis across literature, critical theory, the visual arts, and popular media. Besides offering a critical introduction to the novel and the theories with which it has been read, the book also raises questions of ethics, feminism, and race with which Crash has not usually been identified. The aim is an interdisciplinary text that appeals to a wide variety of readers and provide points of departure for further research. Paul March-Russell is an independent scholar and the current editor of Foundation: The International Review of Science Fiction and co-founder of the intersectional feminist imprint Gold SF (Goldsmiths Press). He is one of the UK representatives for the Science Fiction Research Association. He has published on Ballard and the New Wave several times, most notably in Modernism and Science Fiction (Palgrave Macmillan, 2015) and The Cambridge History of the English Short Story, ed. Dominic Head (2016). His most recent book publication, with Andrew M. Butler, is Rendezvous with Arthur C. Clarke: Centenary Essays (2022).
