Sommario/riassunto	The data in this second progress report are drawn from the spring 1997 Family and Children Experiences Survey (FACES) field test. The Survey is a nationally representative sample of Head Start programs, classrooms, teachers, parents and children examining the quality and effects of Head Start. The field test assessed the feasibility of interviewing and assessing parents and children on a large scale using selected program performance measures. The first progress report, 'Charting our progress : development of the Head Start Program performance measures, was published in 1995.
