Sommario/riassunto	Robert C. Tapella, 25th Public Printer of the U.S. and CEO of the U.S. Government Printing Office (GPO), describes the integration of GPO's traditional printing role with modern technologies. Coverage includes: GPO's direct, daily support to Congress; GPO's production of digital-chip-enhanced passports for Dept. of State; GPO's rapid delivery of reduced-cost print products to Federal government agencies and organizations via the GPOExpress Program; digital products of GPO's Creative Services and Digital Media departments; the scope of the Federal Depository Library Program (FDLP); and FDsys, GPO's Federal Digital System, a digital repository for Federal documents.
