Sommario/riassunto	This book delves into the societal and economic impacts of the COVID-

19 pandemic in Africa, examining reactions and responses at both individual and institutional levels. It challenges the notion of a singular, Western-origin modernity by exploring multiple modernities within African contexts. The volume covers diverse topics such as governance, public health, and socio-economic ramifications, employing methodologies like empirical and policy analysis. The editors aim to provide insights into Africa's preparedness to handle complex crises and highlight community solidarity and institutional reflections. The book is intended for scholars and readers interested in African studies, history, and contemporary global challenges.
