Sommario/riassunto	This book explores the transformative impact of new media on society, focusing on diverse topics such as digital intimacy, activism, artificial intelligence in journalism, and the sociocultural dynamics of digital platforms. Edited by Murat entürk, Massimo Ragnedda, and Glenn Muschert, it features contributions from international scholars who examine issues including digital inequalities, virtual sociality, and the evolving practices of communication and technology. The collection aims to provide a multidisciplinary perspective on how digital media is reshaping human interaction, societal norms, and cultural practices. It is intended for academics, researchers, and anyone interested in media studies, sociology, and the intersection of technology and society.
