Sommario/riassunto	How will the work be configured in the future? What new realities and values will emerge following the transformations of the Fourth Industrial Revolution? To what extent will employee participation be decisive for the success of organizations? The book offers concrete experiences of 'creative' participation of workers and managers within companies committed to developing an intelligent organization. The first part of the book talks about workers, employees or managers who may also have negotiating roles in relation to union bargaining, but who are above all committed to ensuring that everything works, offering opportunities capable of regenerating processes and enhancing workers.
