Sommario/riassunto	Giorgio Caproni is certainly one of the most loved poets of our twentieth century. Anna Dolfi intercepted this widespread passion to involve not only well-known capronists but also young researchers in new research. The result is a book of considerable richness which, together with an overall vision, offers a series of hermeneutic insights on hitherto less popular themes (memory, bestiaries), combining new readings of exemplary texts with unpublished documents, reflections on language, poetics, musical, pictorial, mythical suggestions, without forgetting the capronian activity of translation, self-comment and civil commitment. A functional subdivision of the book into Paths and crossings, Readings (and immediate surroundings), Findings between / from archive papers enhances the diversity of critical offers and close comparisons, surveys and commentary experiments, explication de texte, and puts the great technical expertise and the extreme lyrical depth of an author who, between cantability and dissonances, arpeggios and apostrophes, cabalettes and cadences, flourishes and delays, vocalizations and versicles, reprisals and dismissals, loquacity and aphasia, was able to interpret the contradictory research, the questions, the fears, the faults, the incurable wounds of our time. A. Dolfi teaches modern and contemporary Italian literature at the University of Florence and is a member of the Accademia Nazionale dei Lincei. Among the major scholars of Leopardi, Leopardism, fiction and poetry of the twentieth century, he has designed and edited volumes of a comparative slant dedicated to the "Forms of subjectivity" on the themes of intimate journal, epistolary writing, melancholy and melancholy illness, neurosis and madness, of otherness and double in modern literatures, and collections on writers' essays, philosophical reflection in fiction, the unfinished, the Proustian myth, real and imaginary libraries, the relationship between literature and photographers, between Judaism and testimony. As for Caproni, in 2012 he oversaw the re-edition of the original Rooms of the funicular (Genoa, Giorgio and Lilli Devoto Foundation) and collected in 2014 his numerous essays on the author in a book, Caproni, the lost thing and melancholy.

Sommario/riassunto

Hong Kong is a meeting place for migrant domestic workers, traders, refugees, asylum seekers, tourists, businessmen, and local residents. In Born Out of Place, Nicole Constable looks at the experiences of Indonesian and Filipina women in this Asian world city. Giving voice to the stories of these migrant mothers, their South Asian, African, Chinese, and Western expatriate partners, and their Hong Kong-born babies, Constable raises a serious question: Do we regard migrants as people, or just as temporary workers? This accessible ethnography provides insight into global problems of mobility, family, and citizenship and points to the consequences, creative responses, melodramas, and tragedies of labor and migration policies.
