

| | |
|-------------------------|--|
| 1. Record Nr. | UNINA9910777811403321 |
| Autore | McGarry Fearghal |
| Titolo | Eoin O'Duffy [[electronic resource]] : a self-made hero / / Fearghal McGarry |
| Pubbl/distr/stampa | Oxford ; ; New York, : Oxford University Press, 2005 |
| ISBN | 1-280-75842-2 0-19-153482-X 1-4294-7084-4 |
| Descrizione fisica | 1 online resource (459 p.) |
| Disciplina | 941.7082/2/092 B |
| Soggetti | Fascism - Ireland - History - 20th century Revolutionaries - Ireland Fascists - Ireland Ireland History 20th century Biography |
| Lingua di pubblicazione | Inglese |
| Formato | Materiale a stampa |
| Livello bibliografico | Monografia |
| Note generali | Description based upon print version of record. |
| Nota di bibliografia | Includes bibliographical references (p. [412]-416) and index. |
| Nota di contenuto | Joy to my youth -- The best man in Ulster -- War to the death in Monaghan -- The coming man -- The flower of the young manhood of Ireland -- Preaching the gospel of national virility -- Red terror -- The Irish Mussolini -- Hoch O'Duffy! -- The third greatest man in Europe -- Ireland's quisling. |
| Sommario/riassunto | Eoin O'Duffy was one of the most controversial figures of modern Irish history. A leader of the Irish revolution, and protégé; of Michael Collins, he commanded the Irish police and defence forces, before emerging as Ireland's leading fascist politician in the 1930's. A crusading moralist, obsessed with the need to counter public immorality, and a closet homosexual and alcoholic, O'Duffy's remarkable life was characterised by self-aggrandisement, fantasy, and. contradiction. - ;Eoin O'Duffy was one of the most controversial figures of modern Irish history. A guerrilla leader |