

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910778556603321
Autore	Brown Mark B
Titolo	Science in democracy : expertise, institutions, and representation // Mark B. Brown
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Cambridge, Mass., : MIT Press, ©2009
ISBN	0-262-25805-6 1-282-69434-0 9786612694349 0-262-25864-1
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (371 p.)
Disciplina	320.01
Soggetti	Science - Political aspects Science and state Science and state - Citizen participation Representative government and representation Democracy
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Bibliographic Level Mode of Issuance: Monograph
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references and index.
Nota di contenuto	Modern politics and the mirror of nature -- Niccolo Machiavelli and the popular politics of expertise -- Power and publicity in modern science -- Consent and competence in representative government -- Liberal rationalism and government advisory committees -- Democratizing representation in science and politics -- Thomas Hobbes and the authorization of science -- John Dewey and the reconstruction of representation -- Bruno Latour and the symmetries of science and politics -- How science becomes political -- Elements of democratic representation -- Institutionalizing democratic representation.
Sommario/riassunto	Mark Brown draws on canonical & contemporary political & scientific theory, from Machiavelli to Latour, to throw light on how scientific expertise may be brought into a representative democracy.