

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910778942903321
Autore	Samolsky Russell
Titolo	Apocalyptic futures [[electronic resource] ] : marked bodies and the violence of the text in Kafka, Conrad, and Coetzee // Russell Samolsky
Pubbl/distr/stampa	New York, : Fordham University Press, 2011
ISBN	0-8232-3481-9 0-8232-4124-6 1-283-58022-5 9786613892676 0-8232-4151-3
Edizione	[1st ed.]
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (248 p.)
Collana	Modern Language Initiative
Disciplina	809.3/04
Soggetti	Fiction - 20th century - History and criticism Ethics in literature Apocalyptic literature Prophecy in literature Violence in literature Mimesis in literature
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Description based upon print version of record. "This book is made possible by a collaborative grant from the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation"-- title-page verso.
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references and index.
Nota di contenuto	Introduction: writing violence : marked bodies and retroactive signs -- Metaleptic machines : Kafka, Kabbalah, Shoah -- Kafka and Shoah -- Kafka and Kabbalah -- Inscriptional machines -- Apocalyptic futures : Heart of darkness, embodiment, and African genocide -- Heart of darkness and African genocide -- The genealogy of apocalypse -- Delayed decodings -- Marlow and messianism -- The body in ruins : torture, allegory, and materiality in J. M. Coetzee's Waiting for the barbarians -- The politics of the eternal present -- Torture and allegory -- The body in ruins -- The materiality of the letter -- Mourning the bones -- Coda : the time of inscription: Maus and the apocalypse of number.

Sommario/riassunto

In this book, the author argues that certain modern literary texts have apocalyptic futures. Rather than claim that great writers have clairvoyant powers, he examines the ways in which a text incorporates an apocalyptic event into its future reception. He is thus concerned with the way in which apocalyptic works solicit their future receptions. Apocalyptic Futures also sets out to articulate a new theory and textual practice of the relation between literary reception and embodiment. Deploying the double register of “marks” to show how a text both codes and targets mutilated bodies, the author focuses on how these bodies are incorporated into texts by Kafka, Conrad, Coetzee, and Spiegelman. Situating “In the Penal Colony” in relation to the Holocaust, Heart of Darkness to the Rwandan genocide, and Waiting for the Barbarians to the revelations of torture in apartheid South Africa and contemporary Iraq, the author argues for the ethical and political importance of reading these literary works’ “apocalyptic futures” in our own urgent and perilous situations. The book concludes with a reading of Spiegelman's Maus that offers a messianic counter-time to the law of apocalyptic incorporation.

---