1. Record Nr. UNINA9910779513903321 Autore Tomlinson Jim Titolo Jute no more [[electronic resource]]: transforming Dundee / / edited by Jim Tomlinson and Christopher A. Whatley Dundee, : Dundee University Press, 2011 Pubbl/distr/stampa 1-4744-7327-X ISBN 1-4744-0603-3 1-84586-217-1 Edizione [1st ed.] Descrizione fisica 1 online resource (352 p.) TomlinsonJim Altri autori (Persone) WhatleyChristopher A Disciplina 941.270904 HISTORY / Europe / General Soggetti Dundee (Scotland) Lingua di pubblicazione Inglese Formato Materiale a stampa Livello bibliografico Monografia Note generali Description based upon print version of record. Nota di bibliografia Includes bibliographical references and index. Nota di contenuto pt. 1. Key themes -- pt. 2. Key episodes. Sommario/riassunto This title traces the process of industrial decline in Dundee from the Victorian era onwards and the social and political reverberations of this decline. It is a story of urban transformation, and how this impacted on jobs, the physical environment, social life, culture and politics. The book shows how, as Juteopolis waned, a new Dundee came into being. It concludes by detailing how, in the later twentieth century, Dundee proclaimed itself Scotland's 'City of Discovery' and how biosciences and computer games are what many people now associate with the city.