

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910782582203321
Autore	Cattanach Ann
Titolo	Narrative Approaches in Play with Children [[electronic resource]]
Pubbl/distr/stampa	London, : Jessica Kingsley Publishers Ltd., 2007
ISBN	1-281-73384-9 9786611733841 1-84642-734-7
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (211 p.)
Disciplina	618.92891653
Soggetti	Narrative therapy Medicine Child psychotherapy Play therapy Play Therapy Child Sensory Art Therapies Psychotherapy Age Groups Persons Behavioral Disciplines and Activities Complementary Therapies Therapeutics Pediatrics Health & Biological Sciences
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Description based upon print version of record.
Nota di contenuto	front cover; Narrative Approaches in Play with Children; Contents; Introduction: What is Narrative Play?; Chapter 1 The Therapeutic Relationship: Thinking about Children; Chapter 2 How Did I Begin?; Chapter 3 Managing Past Traumas in the Present; Chapter 4 Making My World: Being in a Family; Chapter 5 School; Chapter 6 Monsters in My World: Coping with the Adult world; Chapter 7 Books and Stories that

Mirror the Child's Life Experiences; REFERENCES; SUBJECT INDEX;
AUTHOR INDEX; back cover;

Sommario/riassunto

Narrative play is a way of communicating with children using imaginative stories and narratives to share and make sense of life events. This book describes using narrative play therapeutically with children who have lived in multiple families, children who have problems with social understanding and children who have learning difficulties. Ann Cattanach explains how children's stories and narratives, whether they are about real or imagined events, can be interpreted as indicators of their experiences, their ideas, and a dimension of who they are. She demonstrates this with examples of children
