Sommario/riassunto	Over the past few years, there has been a notable increase in scholarly presentations and publications involving the role of social justice in educational leadership. The diversity of social justice issues represents one aspect of the impact of globalization on schools and its leaders. In addition, internationally, schools and its leaders are grappling with social justice issues as a once vast world becomes ever smaller through technology and cross-cultural interactions (via economics, war, exchanges, etc.). Yet, while this is going on, social justice issues are often marginalized within educational leadership programs.
