

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910783764903321
Autore	Horne Gerald
Titolo	Red Seas [[electronic resource]] : Ferdinand Smith and radical black sailors in the United States and Jamaica // Gerald Horne
Pubbl/distr/stampa	New York, : New York University Press, c2005
ISBN	0-8147-4454-0 0-8147-7334-6 1-4294-1417-0
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (379 p.)
Disciplina	331.88/113875/092
Soggetti	Labor leaders - United States African American communists Jamaican Americans Labor leaders - Jamaica
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Description based upon print version of record.
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references (p. 293-332) and index.
Nota di contenuto	Introduction: sailing from Jamaica -- Sailing the Red Seas -- Perilous waters -- The Black Ocean -- Few safe harbors -- Wind in their sails -- Storm signal -- Storm, at sea -- Walking the plank -- Black labor at sea -- Dropping anchor in Jamaica -- On the beach -- The final voyage of Ferdinand Smith.
Sommario/riassunto	During the heyday of the U.S. and international labor movements in the 1930's and 1940's, Ferdinand Smith, the Jamaican-born co-founder and second-in-command of the National Maritime Union (NMU), stands out as one of the most-if not the most-powerful black labor leaders in the United States. Smith's active membership in the Communist Party, however, coupled with his bold labor radicalism and shaky immigration status, brought him under continual surveillance by U.S. authorities, especially during the Red Scare in the 1950's. Smith was eventually deported to his homeland of Jamaica, where he