

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910785599603321
Titolo	Employee relations . Volume 32, Number 6 International trade union networks, European works' councils and international labour regimes [[electronic resource] /] / guest editor, Paul Stewart
Pubbl/distr/stampa	[Bingley, UK], : Emerald, 2010
ISBN	1-282-98724-0 9786612987243 0-85724-608-9
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (97 p.)
Collana	Employee relations ; ; vol. 32, no. 6
Altri autori (Persone)	StewartPaul <1956->
Disciplina	346.9423074
Soggetti	Labor unions - Europe International labor activities - Europe
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Description based upon print version of record.
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references.
Nota di contenuto	cover; CONTENTS; EDITORIAL ADVISORY BOARD; International trade union networks, European works' councils and international labour regimes; Dimensions of internationalism and the politics of the labour movement; Internationalising industrial disputes: the case of the Maritime Union of Australia; Trade unions and transnational regulation in Europe: developments and limitations; The European works council as a multidimensional contested terrain; Workers' experiences of skill, training and participation in lean and high performance workplaces in Britain and Italy
Sommario/riassunto	There are a number of places where sociologists of work and labour, together with labour movement activists, might search for alternatives to neo-liberal ideologies and practices. One obvious place to explore the scope and possibility for labour research might be where labour on an international terrain is attempting to match international capital and in this issue of the journal contributors consider this in light of the strategic orientation (and outcomes) of labour networks, sectoral organising, European Works Councils and workplace agenda in the context of management regimes. In addition

