

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910786410603321
Autore	Stocker Barry
Titolo	Rousseau on language and writing : two perspectives // by Barry Stocker and John Bolender ; with a foreword by Lance Kirby
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Piketon, Ohio : , : Andrews UK Limited, , 2014 ©2014
ISBN	0-9893280-2-3 0-9893280-1-5
Edizione	[3rd ed.]
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (162 p.)
Disciplina	194
Soggetti	Philosophy, French - History Philosophy - History
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Cover art: Blombos Ochre.
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references.
Nota di contenuto	Cover; Contents; Front matter; Title page; Publisher Information; Foreword, Lance Kirby; Body matter; Emotion in Language, John Bolender; Rousseau and Derrida on Liberty and on Language, the First Social Institution, Barry Stocker; Reply to "Rousseau and Derrida on Liberty and on Language, the First Social Institution", John Bolender; Reply to "Emotion in Language", Barry Stocker; Back matter; References
Sommario/riassunto	Two contemporary philosophers take two very different approaches to Jean-Jacques Rousseau's Essay on the Origin of Languages, and then each reflects upon the approach of the other. Barry Stocker takes a deconstructionist approach, discussing the importance of Rousseau in the work of Jacques Derrida. John Bolender approaches Rousseau's Essay in terms of cognitive science, most especially in light of the theories of Noam Chomsky and Alan Page Fiske. Both authors agree that Rousseau's Essay sti...