Record Nr. UNINA9910786441903321 Autore Olimat Muhamad Titolo China and the Middle East: from Silk Road to Arab Spring / / Muhamad S. Olimat Milton Park, Abingdon, Oxon; New York:,: Routledge,, 2013 Pubbl/distr/stampa ISBN 1-135-10221-X 0-203-07312-6 1-283-86063-5 1-135-10222-8 Edizione [1st ed.] Descrizione fisica 1 online resource (235 p.) 382.0951/056 Disciplina Soggetti Arab Spring, 2010-China Foreign economic relations Middle East Middle East Foreign economic relations China Silk Road Lingua di pubblicazione Inglese Formato Materiale a stampa Livello bibliografico Monografia Note generali Description based upon print version of record. Nota di bibliografia Includes bibliographical references and index. Nota di contenuto Cover; China and the Middle East; Title Page; Copyright Page; Table of Contents; List of illustrations; Acknowledgements; Abbreviation; Introduction: 1 Sino-Middle East relations: an overview: 2 A fivedimensional paradigm: energy, trade, arms sales, cultural relations and political co-operation; 3 Walking on thin ropes: a tridimensional perspective; 4 China's reaction to the Arab Spring; 5 China and Israel: the Jewish presence in China; 6 China and Saudi Arabia; 7 China and Iran; 8 China and the United Arab Emirates; 9 China-Algeria Relations; Conclusion: Notes: Index Sommario/riassunto This manuscript examines relations between China and the Middle East in historical context. It highlights some of the most important events that characterize the ties between China and the Middle East, and examines their relationship in key areas that include energy, trade. arms sales, culture and politics. The centre of China's relations with Israel is arms sales and advanced technology, while the core of Sino-

Saudi relations is oil. Iran and China are tied with deep historical, civilizational, cultural and political relations, but China's current