

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910786823403321
Autore	Gray Virginia <1945->
Titolo	Interest groups and health care reform across the United States [[electronic resource] /] / Virginia Gray, David Lowery, and Jennifer K. Benz
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Washington, D.C., : Georgetown University Press, 2013
ISBN	1-58901-990-3
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (249 p.)
Collana	American governance and public policy series
Altri autori (Persone)	LoweryDavid BenzJennifer K
Disciplina	362.1/04250973
Soggetti	Health care reform - United States Federal government - United States Medical policy - United States Politics, Practical - United States Public opinion - United States State governments - United States
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Description based upon print version of record.
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references and index.
Nota di contenuto	Interest organizations and health reform in a federal context -- The theory and structure of health interest communities in the states -- State pharmacy assistance programs as innovations -- The politics of managing managed care -- Universal health care in the states -- Conclusion.
Sommario/riassunto	Universal health care was on the national political agenda for nearly a hundred years until a comprehensive (but not universal) health care reform bill supported by President Obama passed in 2010. The most common explanation for the failure of past reform efforts is that special interests were continually able to block reform by lobbying lawmakers. Yet, beginning in the 1970s, accelerating with the failure of the Clinton health care plan, and continuing through the passage of the Affordable Care Act in 2010, health policy reform was alive and well at the state level. Interest Groups and Health Care Reform across the United States assesses the impact of interest groups to determine if collectively they are capable of shaping policy in their own interests or whether they influence policy only at the margins. What can this tell us about the true power of interest groups in this policy arena? The fact that state governments took action in health policy in spite of opposing interests, where the national government could not, offers a compelling puzzle that will be of special interest to scholars and students of public policy, health policy, and state politics.
