

1.	Record Nr.	UNINA9910511609503321
	Autore	Ruusbroec, Jan : van <1293-1381>
	Titolo	Opera omnia / Jan van Ruusbroec ; editor in chief: G. de Baere
	Pubbl/distr/stampa	Turnhout, : Brepols
	Descrizione fisica	v. ; 26 cm.
	Disciplina	878.03
	Locazione	FLFBC
	Collocazione	870.308 CH C.CH 110
	Lingua di pubblicazione	Dutch, Middle (ca. 1050-1350)
	Formato	Materiale a stampa
	Livello bibliografico	Monografia
	Nota di contenuto	v. 10: De calculo seu perfectione filiorum dei de quator subtilibus tentationibus de fide et iudicio epistolae
2.	Record Nr.	UNINA9910786898003321
	Autore	McKee Patricia <1945->
	Titolo	Producing American races : Henry James, William Faulkner, Toni Morrison / / Patricia McKee
	Pubbl/distr/stampa	Durham, NC : , : Duke University Press, , 1999
	ISBN	0-8223-2363-X 0-8223-9766-8
	Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (252 p.)
	Collana	New Americanists
	Disciplina	813.009/355
	Soggetti	American fiction - 20th century - History and criticism Race in literature Literature and society - United States - History - 20th century White people - Race identity - United States African Americans - Race identity African Americans in literature White people in literature
	Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
	Formato	Materiale a stampa

Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Bibliographic Level Mode of Issuance: Monograph
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references (pages [207]-236) and index.
Nota di contenuto	Introduction: race and media -- Reproducing whiteness: The wings of the dove -- Collective whiteness in The golden bowl -- Self-division as racial divide: The sound and the fury -- Playing white men in Light in August -- Black spaces in Sula -- Off the record: Jazz and the production of Black culture.
Sommario/riassunto	In Producing American Races Patricia McKee examines three authors who have powerfully influenced the formation of racial identities in the United States: Henry James, William Faulkner, and Toni Morrison. Using their work to argue that race becomes visible only through image production and exchange, McKee illuminates the significance that representational practice has had in the process of racial construction. McKee provides close readings of six novels—James's The Wings of the Dove and The Golden Bowl, Faulkner's The Sound and the Fury and Light in August, and Morrison's Sula and Jazz—interspersed with excursions into Lacanian and Freudian theory, critical race theory, epistemology, and theories of visibility. In James and Faulkner, she finds, race is represented visually through media that highlight ways of seeing and being seen. Written in the early twentieth century, the novels of James and Faulkner reveal how whiteness depended on visual culture even before film and television became its predominant media. In Morrison, the culture is aural and oral—and often about the absence of the visual. Because Morrison's African American communities produce identity in nonvisual, even anti-visual terms, McKee argues, they refute not just white representations of black persons as objects but also visual orders of representation that have constructed whites as subjects and blacks as objects. With a theoretical approach that both complements and transcends current scholarship about race—and especially whiteness—Producing American Races will engage scholars in American literature, critical race theory, African American studies, and cultural studies. It will also be of value to those interested in the novel as a political and aesthetic form.