

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910786986103321
Autore	Caviedes Alexander A. <1969->
Titolo	Prying open fortress Europe [[electronic resource] ] : the turn to sectoral labor migration / / Alexander A. Caviedes
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Lanham, : Lexington Books, c2010
ISBN	0-7391-3321-7
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (263 p.)
Disciplina	331.6/2094
Soggetti	Foreign workers - Europe Europe Emigration and immigration
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Description based upon print version of record.
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references (p. 211-237) and index.
Nota di contenuto	PRYING OPEN FORTRESS EUROPE; Contents; List of Figures and Tables; Abbreviation List; Acknowledgments; Chapter One A New Paradigm for Labor Migration; Chapter Two Flexibility at the Origin of Employer Preferences; Chapter Three Germany: A Tug of War between Employers and Domestic Institutions; Chapter Four The United Kingdom: Employer Dominance or Revitalized Corporatism?; Chapter Five Austria and the Netherlands: Corporatist Birds of a Feather?; Chapter Six European Labor Migration: Quo vadis?; Appendix; Bibliography; Index; About the Author
Sommario/riassunto	Globalization has increased international migratory pressures, but in advanced industrialized countries entrenched social interests eager to maintain restrictive policies make it difficult for governments to encourage mass migration. This book explains how countries in Western Europe have responded to this challenge by establishing sector-specific labor migration policies that are capable of managing migration toward industries with particular labor shortages while still offering the semblance of managed migration necessary to make such policy politically palatable.