

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910787042703321
Autore	Cumings Bruce <1943->
Titolo	Parallax visions : making sense of American-East Asian relations at the end of the century // Bruce Cumings
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Durham, NC : , : Duke University Press, , 1999
ISBN	0-8223-2276-5 0-8223-9746-3
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (305 p.)
Collana	Asia-Pacific
Disciplina	303.48/27305
Soggetti	HISTORY / United States / General East Asia Relations United States United States Relations East Asia
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Bibliographic Level Mode of Issuance: Monograph
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references (pages [227]-264) and index.
Nota di contenuto	Archaeology, descent, emergence : American mythology and East Asian reality -- East wind, rain [;] red wind [;] black rain : the United States-Japan war, beginning and end -- Colonial formations and deformations : Korea, Taiwan, and Vietnam -- Civil society and democracy in the United States and East Asia -- Nuclear imbalance of terror : the American surveillance regime and North Korea's nuclear program -- The world shakes China -- Boundary displacement : the state, the foundations, and international and area studies during and after the Cold War -- East Asia and the United States : Double vision and hegemonic emergence.
Sommario/riassunto	In a work that synthesizes crucial developments in international relations at the close of the twentieth century, Bruce Cumings—a leading historian of contemporary East Asia—provides a nuanced understanding of how the United States has loomed over the modern history and culture of East Asia. By offering correctives to widely held yet largely inaccurate assessments of the affairs of this region, Parallax Visions shows how relations between the United States, Japan, Vietnam, North and South Korea, China, and Taiwan have been structured by their perceptions and misperceptions of each other. Using information based on thirty years of research, Cumings offers a new perspective on a wide range of issues that originated with the cold war—with particular focus on the possibly inappropriate collaboration between universities, foundations, and intelligence agencies. Seeking to explode the presuppositions that Americans usually bring to the understanding of our relations with East Asia, the study ranges over much of the history of the twentieth century in East Asian–American relations—Pearl Harbor, Hiroshima and Nagasaki, the Korean War, and more recent difficulties in U.S. relations with China and Japan. Cumings also rebuts U.S. media coverage of North Korea’s nuclear diplomacy in the 1990s and examines how experiences of colonialism and postcolonialism have had varying effects on economic development in each of these countries. Positing that the central defining experience of twentieth-century East Asia has been its entanglement first with British and Japanese imperialism, and then with the United States, Cumings ends with a discussion of how the situation could change over the next century as the economic and political global clout of the United States declines. Illuminating the sometimes self-deluded ideology of cold war America, Parallax Visions will engage historians, political scientists, and students and scholars of comparative politics and social theory, as well as readers interested in questions of modernity and the role of the United States in shaping the destinies of modernizing societies in Asia.

---