

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910788141203321
Autore	Smith Bruce L. R.
Titolo	Lincoln Gordon : architect of Cold War foreign policy // Bruce L. R. Smith
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Lexington, Kentucky : , : University Press of Kentucky, , 2015 ©2015
ISBN	0-8131-6545-8
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (537 p.)
Collana	ADST-DACOR Diplomats and Diplomacy Series Studies in Conflict, Diplomacy and Peace
Disciplina	327.2092
Soggetti	Diplomats - United States College teachers - United States Ambassadors - Brazil Ambassadors - United States Cold War United States Officials and employees Biography United States Foreign relations 20th century
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	"An ADST-DACOR Diplomats and Diplomacy Book."
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references and index.
Nota di contenuto	Dorothy and Dad -- Secular humanism at Fieldston -- Harvard in three years -- An American at Oxford -- Allison -- Mobilizing for war -- Controlling the atom -- Birth of the Marshall Plan, 1947-1948 -- The Marshall Plan in action, 1949-1950 -- NATO: from treaty to alliance -- London: a respite -- Business school professor, 1955-1960 -- The Alliance for Progress and JFK advisor -- Ambassador to Brazil -- Assistant secretary -- Johns Hopkins President -- What now? -- Elder statesman -- Going gently.
Sommario/riassunto	After World War II, American statesman and scholar Lincoln Gordon emerged as one of the key players in the reconstruction of Europe. In this biography, Bruce L.R. Smith examines Gordon's substantial contributions to US mobilization during the Second World War, Europe's postwar economic recovery, the security framework for the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, and US policy in Latin America.

