Sommario/riassunto	The journal's objective is to cement its competitive position as a prominent journal of the BISE (Business & Information Systems Engineering) community and reinforce that status through quality improvements and extending its readership. In addition, the journal seeks to establish design science oriented research within the global arena, secure a lasting position and reputation in the global BISE community, and foster constructive dialogue among the discipline's differing international models. Therefore, the journal aims at further developing the theoretical foundations of action in order to preserve sustainable approaches despite tempestuous technical development. Besides, the journal aspires to promote technology transfer in order to make better solutions available faster and to considerably reduce costs of system design and operation. The central mission is to develop, promote, and shape the BISE discipline for the benefit of its members and society.
