

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910789467203321
Autore	Hou Xiaohui
Titolo	Learning from economic downturns : how to better assess, track, and mitigate the impact on the health sector / / Xiaohui Hou, Edit V. Velenyi, Abdo S. Yazbeck, Roberto F. Lunes, and Owen Smith
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Washington, D.C. : , : The World Bank, , 2013
ISBN	1-4648-0061-8
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (pages cm)
Collana	Directions in development
Altri autori (Persone)	HouXiaohui
Disciplina	362.1
Soggetti	Health Care Sector - Economics Economic development
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Description based upon print version of record.
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references.
Nota di contenuto	A framework for health sector resilience -- Assessing vulnerability of the health sector to economic downturns -- Tracking the impact on households and institutions : the Europe and Central Asia story -- Mitigating the effects of economic downturns -- Lessons from the European Union.
Sommario/riassunto	Health and economic development are interconnected. Over the past decades, the health sector has become an increasingly important component of the global economy, evidenced by the growing trend of health expenditures as a share of GDP. The interconnectivity of health and economic development and the cyclical nature of economic performance have emphasized the critical need to build health sector resilience to prepare for inevitable economic downturns. The objective of the book is to raise awareness of the challenges that health systems, in both developing and developed countries, face in times