

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910789516803321
Autore	Chitty Clyde
Titolo	Eugenics, Race and Intelligence in Education [[electronic resource]]
Pubbl/distr/stampa	London, : Continuum International Publishing, 2007
ISBN	1-283-20237-9 9786613202376 1-4411-0414-3
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (182 p.)
Disciplina	370.15
Soggetti	Classism -- Great Britain -- History Education -- Great Britain Eugenics -- Great Britain -- History Eugenics -- United States -- History Intelligence tests -- Great Britain -- History Intelligence tests -- United States -- History Nature and nurture Racism -- United States -- History Educational psychology - Great Britain Eugenics - United States Intellect Ability in children Education and state Education Sociology & Social History Social Sciences Family & Marriage Theory & Practice of Education
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Description based upon print version of record.
Nota di contenuto	Contents; Acknowledgements; Preface to the New Edition; Foreword; The Structure of the Book; Introduction: Nature versus Nurture; Chapter 1 The 'Threat' of Mass Education; Chapter 2 The Origins of the Eugenics

Movement; Chapter 3 Eugenics and the Intellectuals; Chapter 4 IQ and Eleven-Plus Selection; Chapter 5 Intelligence Testing Challenged; Chapter 6 The New Preoccupation with Intelligence and 'Race'; Chapter 7 The Durability of Eugenic Theories; Conclusion: Prospects for the Future; Notes; References; Index

Sommario/riassunto

For over a hundred years, psychologists and human biologists have been engaged in an often heated debate as to whether 'heredity' or 'environment' should be viewed as the determining factor in the creation of the human personality. For teachers and educationists, the discussion has tended to focus on how the human mind functions and intellectual powers develop. The controversy is often simply expressed in terms of 'nature' versus 'nurture,' with some scientists declaring that human beings are a product of a transaction between the two. To many, such enquiry and speculation is little more than
