

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910790427403321
Autore	Brooks Robert Andrew
Titolo	Cheaper by the hour [[electronic resource]] : temporary lawyers and the deprofessionalization of the law / / Robert A. Brooks
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Philadelphia, : Temple University Press, 2011
ISBN	1-4399-0287-9 1-4399-0285-2
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (235 p.)
Disciplina	331.25/729
Soggetti	Lawyers - Employment - United States Temporary employment - United States
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Description based upon print version of record.
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references.
Nota di contenuto	Degraded and insecure : the "new" workforce -- "Basically interchangeable" : the creation of the temporary lawyer -- Life on the concourse level : doing document review -- Box shopping in "Nike town" : struggles over work -- "Keeping count of every freakin' minute" : struggles over time -- "A glorified data entry person" : struggles over identity -- "I would rather grow in India" : the emerging legal underclass.
Sommario/riassunto	Recent law school graduates often work as temporary attorneys, but law firm layoffs and downsizing have strengthened the temporary attorney industry. Cheaper by the Hour is the first book-length account of these workers. Drawing from participant observation and interviews, Robert A. Brooks provides a richly detailed ethnographic account of freelance attorneys in Washington, DC. He places their document review work in the larger context of the deprofessionalization of skilled labor and considers how professionals relegated to temporary jobs feel diminished, degraded, or de