

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910791239803321
Autore	Griswold Daniel T. <1958->
Titolo	Mad about trade [[electronic resource]] : why Main Street America should embrace globalization // Daniel Griswold
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Washington, D.C., : Cato Institute, c2009
ISBN	1-282-59999-2 9786612599996 1-935308-20-3
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (226 p.)
Disciplina	382/.710973
Soggetti	Free trade - United States Balance of trade - United States Consumers - United States Globalization
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Description based upon print version of record.
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references and index.
Nota di contenuto	Table of Contents; Foreword; Preface; Acknowledgements; 1. Introduction: Main Street Meets the Global Economy; 2. America's Consuming Interest in Trade; 3. How American Workers and Families Have Traded Up; 4. U.S. Manufacturing in a Global Economy: More Stuff, Better Stuff, Fewer Workers; 5. America's Trade Deficit: Accounting Abstraction or Public Enemy No. 1?; 6. Foreign Investment: Paying Dividends for American Families; 7. America in the Global Economy: Strong, Free, and Open for Business; 8. More Like Us: The Growth of the Global Middle Class 9. The Protectionist Swindle: How Trade Barriers Cheat the Poor and the Middle Class 10. A Trade Agenda for a Free People; Notes; Index; About the Author; Cato Institute
Sommario/riassunto	Mad about Trade is the much-needed antidote to a rising tide of protectionist sentiment in the United States. The book explains the benefits of free trade and globalization for middle-class, Main Street Americans exposed to a barrage of negative claims from politicians and commentators such as Lou Dobbs. It offers a spirited defense of free trade and globalization that engages the populists on their own turf. In eight timely and provocative chapters, the book shows how middle- and low-income families benefit from import competition, and how a more globalized U.S. economy has created better job
