

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910791431403321
Autore	Waselkov Gregory A
Titolo	A conquering spirit [[electronic resource] ] : Fort Mims and the Redstick War of 1813-1814 // Gregory A. Waselkov
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Tuscaloosa, : University of Alabama Press, c2006
ISBN	0-8173-8477-4
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (426 pages)
Disciplina	973.5/238
Soggetti	Creek War, 1813-1814 Massacres - Alabama - Fort Mims - History Fort Mims (Ala.) History
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Description based upon print version of record.
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references (p. [353]-382) and index.
Nota di contenuto	The Tensaw -- Many paths to the Tensaw -- Americanization of Mississippi Territory -- Red path to war -- Creek civil war to Redstick war -- The battle of Fort Mims -- A country given up -- Trying times, 1813-1814 -- Remembering Fort Mims -- Reverberations of Fort Mims.
Sommario/riassunto	The Fort Mims massacre changed the course of American history in many ways, not the least of which was the ensuing rise of one Andrew Jackson to the national stage. The unprecedented Indian victory over the encroaching Americans who were bent on taking their lands and destroying their culture horrified many and injured the young nation's pride. Tragedies such as this one have always rallied Americans to a common cause: a single-minded determination to destroy the enemy and avenge the fallen. The August 30, 1813, massacre at Fort Mims, involving hundreds of dead men, women, and children, w