

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910791973303321
Autore	Marcoux Jon Bernard
Titolo	Pox, empire, shackles, and hides [[electronic resource]] : the Townsend site, 1670-1715 // Jon Bernard Marcoux
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Tuscaloosa, : University of Alabama Press, c2010
ISBN	0-8173-8483-9
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (193 p.)
Disciplina	975.004/97557
Soggetti	Cherokee Indians - Tennessee - Townsend - History Cherokee Indians - Antiquities Cherokee Indians - Dwellings - Tennessee - Townsend Households - Tennessee - Townsend - History Excavations (Archaeology) - Tennessee - Townsend Townsend (Tenn.) Antiquities
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Description based upon print version of record.
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references and index.
Nota di contenuto	Pox, empire, shackles, and hides : defining the English contact period in the Southeast, 1670-1715 -- The Townsend site : the archaeological embodiment of a shatter zone community -- Potting traditions and household identities at Townsend -- Space and time in the daily lives of Townsend households -- Appendix A. Statistical methodology -- Appendix B. Architectural data for Cherokee and Mississippian structures.
Sommario/riassunto	The late-seventeenth and early-eighteenth centuries were an extremely turbulent time for southeastern American Indian groups. Indeed, between the founding of the Charles Town colony along the south Atlantic coast in 1670 and the outbreak of the Yamasee War in 1715, disease, warfare, and massive population displacements dramatically altered the social, political, and economic landscape of the entire region. This volume examines issues of culture contact and social identity by exploring how this chaotic period played out in the daily lives of Cherokee households, especially those