| Sommario/riassunto      | After almost two decades of continuous development in bio, circular, and green economy, the time is ripe for the assessment of the major achievements and challenges that private and public enterprises face today to further enhance these global sustainability concepts. Due to the central role of political incentives for the development and implementation of environmentally friendly and sustainable practices, the present book project focuses on the nexus between public policies, institutions, quality of public sector management, and patterns of interaction between government and private businesses in backing bio, green, and circular economy practices and eco-innovation. In addition, the project also accommodates surveys that elaborate on the differences between the implementation of new organizational forms and scientific innovations in technologically advanced and developing settings. |

| Nota di contenuto       | Foreword- Rashmi Bansal Prologue: The Classroom Is My World Is Society Hanging on to an Archaic Concept of the Classroom? Can Adults Really "Teach" Young People? If You Approach the Ocean with a Spoon, Won't It Look Like a Drop? What Are the Different Lenses for Viewing Youth? Why Are Youth-Centric Spaces So Critical? What Design Principles Can Help to Cocreate a Vibrant 5th Space? Epilogue: The World Is My Classroom Index.   |
| Sommario/riassunto      | The Ocean in a Drop explores how young people have contributed significantly to society in the past, and suggests ways in which they can take centre stage again. Traditionally, society has legitimized four spaces for young people: the family, friends, education/careers, and leisure. The book introduces the concept of the 5th Space-a space that goes beyond the commonly used terms of volunteerism and Active Citizenship and focuses on three critical aspects of youth development: understanding the Self, building meaningful relationships, and impacting Society. By facilitating young people to connect their selves with society and by developing skills, values, and attitudes that enable them to impact the world around them, 5th Spaces become a critical strategy for renewing society. From the lessons learnt from the Indian Independence movement, theories of youthhood, interviews with key stakeholders, and Pravah's own experiences of working with young people, the book argues that youth once again need to be at the | forefront of nation building.
