. Record Nr. Autore	UNINA9910793554603321 Carpenter Scott Dominic <1958->
Titolo	Integrating worlds : off-campus study in undergraduate education / / Scott D. Carpenter, Helena Kaufman, and Malene Torp
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Sterling, Virginia : , : Taylor & Francis Group, , [2023] ©2019
ISBN	1-00-344535-7 1-000-97260-7 1-003-44535-7 1-62036-002-0
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (202 pages)
Disciplina Soggetti	370.116 Foreign study American students - Foreign countries International education - United States University extension - United States Education, Higher - Aims and objectives - United States Education, Higher - Curricula - United States
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Livello bibliografico Nota di bibliografia	Monografia Includes bibliographical references and index.

1.

supplement or interlude -- using it to fuel their education and inspire their careers. They make the case that effective off-campus study (whether study abroad or study away) begins and ends on the home campus, requiring its integration into the curriculum, entwining oncampus and off-campus experiences, and making them mutually reinforcing. They offer evidence that off-campus study, when properly designed and implemented, can have a multiplier effect on learning, particularly when combined with other high-impact practices; asserting it can provide access to complex cultural and scientific problems in their natural context, adding practical and experiential components to classroom learning, and serve as a springboard for more advanced study and research when students return to their home campus. This book proposes that faculty or departments go beyond the generally episodic ways that currently link on-campus curricula to off-campus experience. It aims to speak, beyond specialists in international or intercultural education, to faculty, deans and provosts who may have little direct experience of study abroad, and feel unprepared to address an issue that is assuming a growing importance as disciplines and institutions address the complexities of our rapidly changing world. The goal of this book is to fuel such conversations.