

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910794259303321
Autore	Leigh Philip
Titolo	Trading with the enemy : the covert economy during the American Civil War // Philip Leigh
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Yardley, Pennsylvania : , : Westholme, , [2014] ©2014
ISBN	1-59416-576-9
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (xvii, 182 pages) : illustrations, maps
Disciplina	973.71
Soggetti	Interstate commerce - United States - History - 19th century Cotton trade - United States - History - 19th century United States History Civil War, 1861-1865 Economic aspects
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references and index.
Nota di contenuto	The world cotton economy -- Official policy -- The Port Royal experiment -- Matamoros -- Mississippi Valley trade -- Abusing the blockade -- Norfolk -- Kirby Smithdom -- Eyes tightly shut.
Sommario/riassunto	In Trading with the Enemy: The Covert Economy During the American Civil War, New York Times Disunion contributor Philip Leigh recounts the little-known story of clandestine commerce between the North and South. Cotton was so important to the Northern economy that Yankees began growing it on the captured Sea Islands of South Carolina. Soon the neutral port of Matamoros, Mexico, became a major trading center, where nearly all the munitions shipped to the port - much of it from Northern armories - went to the Confederacy. After the fall of New Orleans and Vicksburg, a frenzy of contraband-for-cotton swept across the vast trans-Mississippi Confederacy, with Northerners sometimes buying the cotton directly from the Confederate government. A fascinating study, Trading with the Enemy adds another layer to our understanding of the Civil War.