

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910797582703321
Autore	Dowd Marion
Titolo	The archaeology of caves in Ireland // Marion Dowd
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Oxford : , : Oxbow Books, , 2015
ISBN	1-78297-814-3 1-78297-816-X
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (335 p.)
Disciplina	941.5
Soggetti	Caves - Social aspects - Ireland - History Community life - Ireland - History Social archaeology - Ireland Excavations (Archaeology) - Ireland Caves - Ireland Speleology - Ireland Ireland Antiquities
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Description based upon print version of record.
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references and index.
Nota di contenuto	People in caves, caves in people -- Excursions into places of fearful darkness : 300 years investigating caves -- Caves and cave archaeology in Ireland -- Gathering the dead : the Mesolithic (8000-3900 BC) -- Thresholds to transformation : the Neolithic (3900-2400 BC) -- Journeying deeper into darkness : the Bronze Age (2400-600 BC) -- Eyes full of darkness : the Iron Age (600 BC-AD 400) -- Out of the darkness, into the light : the early Medieval period (AD 400-1169) -- Silent spaces or speaking volumes? : the Medieval period (AD 1169-1550) -- Diverse biographies : post-Medieval period to 21st century (AD 1550-present) -- End note: The future of Irish cave archaeology -- Appendix 1: Caves of archaeological significance in Ireland.
Sommario/riassunto	"This book provides a synthesis of what we currently know about how caves were used and perceived by communities spanning the 10,000 years of human occupation of Ireland, from the earliest Mesolithic hunter gatherers to the 21st century urban dweller"--Provided by publisher.

