

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910798137103321
Autore	Hazan Haim
Titolo	Simulated dreams : Israeli youth and virtual Zionism // Haim Hazan
Pubbl/distr/stampa	New York : , : Berghahn Books, , 2001
ISBN	1-57181-821-9 1-78238-935-0
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (128 p.)
Collana	New directions in anthropology ; ; volume 14
Disciplina	956.9405
Soggetti	National characteristics, Israeli Zionism Jews - Israel - Identity Memory - Social aspects Jewish youth - Israel - Attitudes Popular culture - Israel Israel Social conditions 20th century
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Description based upon print version of record.
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references (pages) and index.
Nota di contenuto	SIMULATED DREAMS; CONTENTS; PROLOGUE; INTRODUCTION; 1. RESOLVING SOCIAL INEQUALITIES; 2. REVISITING THE HOLOCAUST; 3. SERIALIZING WAR; 4. TAMING YOUTH CULTURE; 5. LIVING AFTER THE ASSASSINATION; EPILOGUE; REFERENCES; INDEX
Sommario/riassunto	At the core of the author's concern stands the question of cultural transmutation in an era riddled with media channels and all-embracing messages. Fragments of the Israeli experience are pieced together in this provocative essay to provide a socio-anthropological agenda for some of the issues involved in the manufacturing of items of symbolic solidarity and common national imagery in an epoch of social disunification and cultural pastiche. The author argues that even though the aesthetic forms of major cultural idioms have unrecognizably altered and are accommodated to befit the shape and style of post-modern living, the basic programs underlying them have remained immutable. Furthermore, it is the quality of adaptability to changing aesthetic conventions that allow such symbolic corner-stones to be left unturned. The case of the youth culture is chose here as a yardstick for examining the double voice of such process - the global versus the tribal.
