

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910806973403321
Autore	Crawford Neta
Titolo	Accountability for killing : moral responsibility for collateral damage in America's post-9/11 wars // Neta Crawford
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Oxford, : Oxford University Press, 2013
ISBN	0-19-998174-4 0-19-998173-6 0-19-998172-8
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (503 p.)
Disciplina	172/.42
Soggetti	Military ethics - United States Civilian war casualties War victims Guilt and culture - United States War - Moral and ethical aspects - United States
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Description based upon print version of record.
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references and index.
Nota di contenuto	Grammar and vocabulary -- How they die -- Norms in tension -- When soldiers snap -- Command responsibility -- Organizational responsibility -- Political responsibility -- Public responsibility -- Conclusion.
Sommario/riassunto	In May 2009, American B-1B bombers dropped 2000-pound and 500-pound bombs in the village of Garani, Afghanistan following a Taliban attack. The dead included anywhere from 25 to over 100 civilians. The US military went into damage control mode, making numerous apologies to the Afghan government and the townspeople. Afterward, the military announced that it would modify its aerial support tactics. This episode was hardly an anomaly. As anyone who has followed the Afghanistan war knows, these types of incidents occur with depressing regularity. Indeed, as Neta Crawford shows in this book, they are intrinsic to the American way of warfare today.