1. Record Nr. UNINA9910806973403321 Autore Crawford Neta Titolo Accountability for killing: moral responsibility for collateral damage in America's post-9/11 wars / / Neta Crawford Oxford,: Oxford University Press, 2013 Pubbl/distr/stampa ISBN 0-19-998174-4 0-19-998173-6 0-19-998172-8 Descrizione fisica 1 online resource (503 p.) Disciplina 172/.42 Military ethics - United States Soggetti Civilian war casualties War victims Guilt and culture - United States War - Moral and ethical aspects - United States Lingua di pubblicazione Inglese Formato Materiale a stampa Livello bibliografico Monografia Note generali Description based upon print version of record. Nota di bibliografia Includes bibliographical references and index. Nota di contenuto Grammar and vocabulary -- How they die -- Norms in tension -- When soldiers snap -- Command responsibility -- Organizational responsibility -- Political responsibility -- Public responsibility --Conclusion. In May 2009, American B-1B bombers dropped 2000-pound and 500-Sommario/riassunto pound bombs in the village of Garani, Afghanistan following a Taliban attack. The dead included anywhere from 25 to over 100 civilians. The US military went into damage control mode, making numerous apologies to the Afghan government and the townspeople. Afterward, the military announced that it would modify its aerial support tactics. This episode was hardly an anomaly. As anyone who has followed the Afghanistan war knows, these types of incidents occur with depressing regularity. Indeed, as Neta Crawford shows in this book, they are intrinsic to the American way of warfare today.