1. Record Nr. UNINA9910807058903321 Autore Errington Elizabeth Jane <1951-> Titolo Emigrant worlds and transatlantic communities [[electronic resource]]: migration to Upper Canada in the first half of the nineteenth century // Elizabeth Jane Errington Montreal; ; Ithaca, : McGill-Queen's University Press, c2007 Pubbl/distr/stampa ISBN 1-282-86608-7 9786612866081 0-7735-7561-8 1 electronic text (xii, 244 p. : ill., map) : digital file Descrizione fisica Collana McGill-Queen's studies in ethnic history. Series two;; 24 306.85086/9120941 Disciplina British - Kinship - Ontario - History - 19th century Soggetti Immigrants - Family relationships - Ontario - History - 19th century Families - Ontario - History - 19th century Immigrants - Ontario Ontario Emigration and immigration History 19th century Great Britain Emigration and immigration History 19th century Lingua di pubblicazione Inglese Formato Materiale a stampa Livello bibliografico Monografia Nota di bibliografia Includes bibliographical references and index. Nota di contenuto To go or not to go -- Bustle of preparation -- Nether world on the Atlantic -- Into the "strange land" -- Transatlantic webs of kin and community -- Conclusion -- Note on sources: reading and writing about the emigrants' world. Sommario/riassunto Emigrant Worlds and Transatlantic Communities gives voice to the Irish, Scottish, English, and Welsh women and men who negotiated the complex and often dangerous world of emigration between 1815 and 1845. Using "information wanted" notices that appeared in colonial newspapers as well as emigrants' own accounts, Errington illustrates that emigration was a family affair. Individuals made their decisions within a matrix of kin and community - their experiences shaped by their identities as husbands and wives, parents and children, siblings and cousins. The Atlantic crossing divided families, but it was also the means of reuniting kin and rebuilding old communities. Emigration created its own unique world - a world whose inhabitants remained well aware of the transatlantic community that provided them with a continuing sense of identity, home, and family.