

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910808674203321
Autore	Buhler-Wilkerson Karen
Titolo	No place like home : a history of nursing and home care in the United States // Karen Buhler-Wilkerson
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Baltimore, : John Hopkins University Press, 2001
ISBN	0-8018-7479-3
Edizione	[1st ed.]
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (xiv, 293 pages) : illustrations
Disciplina	362.1/4/0973
Soggetti	Home nursing - History Home nursing - United States
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Bibliographic Level Mode of Issuance: Monograph
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references and index.
Nota di contenuto	Intro -- Contents -- Preface and Acknowledgments -- Prelude -- Part I Inventing Home Care in the Nineteenth Century -- 1 Trained Nurses for the Sick Poor -- 2 Creating Their Own Domain Ladies, Nurses, and the Sick Poor -- Part II The Work and Reality -- 3 "Treatment of Families in Which There Is Sickness" -- 4 Caring in Its Proper Place Race Relations at Home -- 5 Lillian Wald and the Invention of Public Health Nursing -- Home Nursing Care-Yesterday, Today, and Tomorrow -- Part III Management and Money -- 6 The Business of Private Nursing -- 7 A Cautionary Tale The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company's Home Care Experiment -- Part IV Reinventing Home Care in the Mid-Twentieth Century -- 8 "An Unchanging Purpose in a Changing World" -- 9 Home Care Becomes the Fashion-Again -- The Future of Home Care -- Abbreviations -- Notes -- Index.
Sommario/riassunto	Buhler-Wilkerson links local ideas about the formation and function of home-based services to national events and health care agendas, and she gives special attention to care of the "dangeroussick, particularly poor immigrants with infectious diseases, and the "uninteresting-sick--those with chronic illnesses.