

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910809527203321
Autore	Dakake Maria Massi <1968->
Titolo	The charismatic community [[electronic resource]] : Shiite identity in early Islam // Maria Massi Dakake
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Albany, : State University of New York Press, c2007
ISBN	0-7914-8034-8 1-4294-9815-3
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (337 p.)
Collana	SUNY series in Islam
Disciplina	297.8/209
Soggetti	Shiah - History Shiites - History
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Bibliographic Level Mode of Issuance: Monograph
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references (p. 301-311) and index.
Nota di contenuto	Introduction -- Pt. I. The principle of walayah and the origins of the community -- Walayah in the Islamic tradition -- The Ghadir Khumm tradition: walayah and the spiritual distinctions of Ali b. Abi Talib -- Walayah, authority and religious community in the first civil war -- The Shiite community in the aftermath of the first civil war -- Pt. II. Walayah, faith and the charismatic nature of Shiite identity -- Walayah as the essence of religion: theological developments at the turn of the second Islamic century -- Membership in the Shiite community and salvation -- Predestination and the mythological origins of Shiite identity -- The charismatic nature and spiritual distinction of the Shiites -- Pt. III. Creating a community within a community -- Shiites and non-Shiites: the distinction between Iman and Islam -- Degrees of faith: establishing a hierarchy within the Shiite community -- "Rarer than red sulphur": women's identity in early Shiism -- Perforated boundaries: establishing two codes of conduct.
Sommario/riassunto	Looks at the emergence of Shiism as a distinct communal identity within Islam.