

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910811662103321
Autore	Schaff Jon D. <1971->
Titolo	Abraham Lincoln's statesmanship and the limits of liberal democracy / / Jon D. Schaff
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Carbondale : , : Southern Illinois University Press, , [2019] ©2019
ISBN	0-8093-3738-X
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (207 pages)
Disciplina	973.7092
Soggetti	Presidents - United States Political leadership - United States - History United States Politics and government 1861-1865 United States History Civil War, 1861-1865
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Significant revision of author's thesis (doctoral)--Loyola University Chicago, 2002, titled The domestic Lincoln : presidential leadership, realignment and public policy.
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references and index.
Nota di contenuto	Lincoln and the architecture of democracy's soul -- Lincoln and the political virtues of prudence and moderation -- Lincoln and the defense of natural rights -- Lincoln's political economy in the American tradition -- The domestic Lincoln: presidential power and the Second American Revolution -- Lincoln and the Second American Revolution -- Whigs and Lincoln: a realignment reconsidered -- The domestic Lincoln and Congressional government.
Sommario/riassunto	"Schaff analyzes how Lincoln's political thought and presidential statesmanship illustrate the need for a limit to democratic excess. Decent government, he argues, demands a balance of competing political goods as well as the strong statesmanship Lincoln exemplified to maintain that equilibrium"--