Take a positive, practical, but sceptical look at your education and what is needed to register as an architect. Whatever you decide, global warming is staring us in the face; Step 1: get going and keep a sketchbook!; Step 2: tune in and keep a sketchbook! 2.Design your career: Fuel your talent with passion and knowledge. Get to grips with what you need to know and do, and work out how to get it. You need to be well-read, have talent, artistry and knowledge, and be opportunisticStep 3: think differently; Step 4: get help; 3.Design dynamic: Studying architecture is like learning a language. If you don't understand the grammar and vocabulary, how can you expect to communicate fluently?; Step 5: build your knowledge (use your sketchbook); Step 6: develop your skills 4.Architectural courses: Your career depends on you. If you want to be an architect in the UK, you need to be on an accredited course: does your university meet the requirements?Step 7: launch your career; Step 8: select a university; 5.Architectural practice: Work out where you want to go and how to get there - but serendipity may take you somewhere exciting if you allow it; Step 9: research the market; Step 10: select a practice; 6. Your application: How to break into a cut and thrust environment where creative and talented people are jostling for position.; Step 11: send in your agent Step 12: lead with style Step 13: write your CV; Step 14: prepare for the interview; Step 15: accepting or rejecting an offer; 7. Registration: The title 'architect' is protected by law in the UK. Sommario/riassunto

After three years of education, architecture students have to start out on their first year of practical training as the initial step in a career in the professional world--all too often without enough clear advice to make sure that their first step is in the right direction. Towards a New Architect helps you to make the right moves. It explores how to research the opportunities available, prepare your CV, make sure that it gets you noticed for the right reasons and deliver a successful interview as part of a clear plan for building your career as an architect. For many architect
