Sommario/riassunto	Viviane Chetrit-Vatine's book delves into the ethical dimensions of the psychoanalytic situation, emphasizing the responsibility towards the

'Other'. It explores philosophical and psychoanalytic perspectives, primarily drawing on the works of Emmanuel Levinas, Sigmund Freud, and Jacques Lacan. The book examines the asymmetry in the analyst-patient relationship as both an ethical and seductive environment, where the analyst holds significant influence. It discusses the foundational ethical demands present at the beginning of life and the impact of maternal desires on psychoanalytic practice. The book is aimed at psychoanalysts and scholars interested in the intersection of ethics and psychoanalysis, providing insights into the transformative power of psychoanalytic practice.
