

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910818689003321
Autore	Uekotter Frank <1970->
Titolo	The greenest nation? : a new history of German environmentalism // Frank Uekotter
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Cambridge, Mass. : , : The MIT Press, , 2014 ©2014
ISBN	0-262-32241-2 0-262-32240-4
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (248 p.)
Collana	History for a sustainable future
Disciplina	333.720943
Soggetti	Environmentalism - History - 21st century Environmental policy - History - 21st century Environmentalism - Germany - History - 20th century Environmentalism - Germany - History - 21st century
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Description based upon print version of record.
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references and index.
Nota di contenuto	Environmentalism and environmental history in the twenty-first century -- A brief history of German environmentalism, part 1: 1900-1980 -- Interim remarks: explaining the rise of environmentalism -- A brief history of German environmentalism, part 2: 1980-2013 -- German environmentalism in midpassage -- How green after all?
Sommario/riassunto	This study provides an overview of the development of German environmentalism from the late nineteenth century to the present. Looking at Germany in an international context, it discusses the full range of environmental issues and how it evolved from a concern about pollution and natural monuments to global warming and biodiversity. It defines environmentalism broadly and looks at civic activism, government policies and culture and life. The book seeks to historicize the notion that Germany may serve as a role model for other industrialized countries.