

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910818844303321
Autore	Lacombe Dany
Titolo	Blue politics : pornography and the law in the age of feminism / / Dany Lacombe
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Toronto, [Ontario] : , : University of Toronto Press, , 1994 ©1994
ISBN	1-282-04544-X 9786612045448 1-4426-7147-5
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (242 p.)
Disciplina	363.4/7/0971
Soggetti	Obscenity (Law) - Canada Pornography - Law and legislation - Government policy - Canada Pornography - Law and legislation - Social aspects - Canada Feminism - Canada Livres numeriques. e-books. Electronic books. Kanada Canada
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Bibliographic Level Mode of Issuance: Monograph
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references and index.
Nota di contenuto	Contents -- Acknowledgments -- Chapter 1: Introduction -- Law reform and 'the order of things' -- A methodological note -- Part 1: Pornography as an Object of Knowledge -- Chapter 2: The Emergence of a Feminist Position on Pornography -- The religious and moral rationales for the prohibition of obscenity in the 1960s -- The liberal rationale for the repeal of obscenity legislation in the 1960s -- The feminist anti-pornography movement -- The language of causality and the language of rights: The mobilization of scientific and legal discourses The politics of scienceThe politics of interpretation -- The politics of sexuality -- Chapter 3: Compliance with and Resistance to the Feminist

Claim of Harm -- The conservative position on pornography in the 1980s -- The mobilization of science: Facts versus morality -- The mobilization of law to restore a conservative common good -- The civil libertarian position in the 1980s -- The position of feminists against censorship -- The position of sex radicals and sex workers -- Summary -- Part 2: Institutional Practices
 Chapter 4: The Special Committee on Pornography and ProstitutionThe creation of the Fraser Committee -- The report of the Fraser Committee -- The composition of the Fraser Committee -- Criminal law and the protection of fundamental values -- Ambiguous logic: A feminist rationale combined with conventional ideas about criminalization -- The marginalization of alternative discourses -- The reliance on institutional expertise and practices -- Conclusion --
 Chapter 5: Bill C-114: The First Attempt at Pornography Law Reform -- The impact of a change in government
 Pressure from pro-censorship forcesThe policy-making process in the Department of Justice -- The consultative process in the Tory caucus -- The centrality of child sexual abuse -- Public reaction and the death of Bill C-114 -- Chapter 6: Bill C-54: The Impossible Compromise -- Dissenting reactions from artists, civil libertarians, and the media -- Mixed reactions from feminists -- The revolt of the librarians -- The retreat of the conservatives -- The death of Bill C-54: Mixed results -- Five years later: The Butler decision
 Chapter 7: The Enabling Quality of Law ReformLaw reform and science -- Law reform and the politics of rights -- Conclusion -- Epilogue: Postmodern Art in the Age of Obscenity -- Appendix: List of Sources -- Notes -- Bibliography -- Index -- A -- B -- C -- D -- E -- F -- G -- H -- I -- J -- K -- L -- M -- N -- O -- P -- R -- S -- T -- U -- V -- W

Sommario/riassunto

In 1985 the Special Committee on Pornography and Prostitution, the Fraser Committee, recommended the criminalization of violent and degrading sexually explicit material on the ground that it harmed women. On two occasions (in 1986 with Bill C-114 and in 1987 with Bill C-54) the Mulroney government proposed a more restrictive approach to the regulation of pornography. Despite the support of various feminist and religious/family-oriented organizations, the government's attempts at law reform failed. Obscenity provisions were neither repealed nor replaced by a law criminalizing pornography. Blue Politics looks at the social and political mechanisms that initiated, shaped, and finally defeated the controversial legal proposals of the Conservative government in the 1980s. Dany Lacombe documents the emergence of a feminist definition of pornography, analyses the impact this definition had on the debate between conservative and civil libertarian organizations, and identifies the emergence of groups who strongly resisted the attempt to reform the law: feminists against censorship and sex radicals. Finally, she examines the way in which institutional practices are shaped by and yet shape the power relations between groups. The emphasis is on the way such power relations are embodied in the policy-making process. Drawing on Michel Foucault's concept of 'power/knowledge,' Lacombe reveals how the process to criminalize pornography inaugurated a controversial politics that produced collective identities and transformed power relations. She shows law reform as a strategy that both constrains and enables action.