

1. Record Nr.	UNINA9910819099603321
Autore	Dyson Stephen Benedict
Titolo	The Blair identity : leadership and foreign policy // Stephen Benedict Dyson
Pubbl/distr/stampa	Manchester ; ; New York, : Manchester University Press, 2009
ISBN	1-78170-217-9 1-84779-290-1
Edizione	[1st ed.]
Descrizione fisica	1 online resource (174 p.)
Disciplina	327.41
Soggetti	Political leadership Great Britain Foreign relations 1997-
Lingua di pubblicazione	Inglese
Formato	Materiale a stampa
Livello bibliografico	Monografia
Note generali	Includes index.
Nota di bibliografia	Includes bibliographical references and index.
Nota di contenuto	Blair's wars -- Neoclassical realism and leader psychology: a theory of foreign policy -- Tony Blair's personality and leadership style -- The Kosovo and Sierra Leone interventions -- September 11 and the 'war on terror' -- Iraq: Blair's war -- Postwar Iraq -- The Blair balance sheet.
Sommario/riassunto	Why did Tony Blair take Britain to war with Iraq? Because, this book argues, he was following the core political beliefs and style - the Blair identity - manifest and consistent throughout his decade in power. Kosovo, Sierra Leone, Afghanistan, and finally Iraq were wars to which Blair was drawn due to his black-and-white framing of the world, his overwhelming confidence that he could shape events, and his tightly-held, presidential style of government. In this new application of political psychology to the British prime ministership, Dyson analyses every answer Blair gave to a foreign policy