Sommario/riassunto	Hifikepunge Pohamba has been the second Head of State since Namibia's Independence in 1990. As successor to Sam Nujoma he held office for two terms from March 2005 to March 2015. At the end of his presidency he was awarded the Mo Ibrahim Prize for good governance as the fifth statesman of the continent. This overview covers the twelve years from his election in 2004 until his retirement as documented in the chapters previously published in the Africa Yearbook. Politics, Economy and Society South of the Sahara , reviewing Namibia's development during his presidency. An introductory analysis putting the Pohamba era into the context of Namibian society precedes the chronological account.
